

The left's war on Christians continues

Democratic National Committee resolutions claim that the Republican Party is a theocracy whose morals, values and patriotism should not be used to influence public policy. A 2020 poll found that 67% of Republicans believe that the Bible "should sway laws," while 33% of Democrats do not. About 63% of the U.S. claims to be Christians and therefore are labeled as deluded theocrats.

With that said, examine some samples of how Democrats are waging war on Christians.

When COVID lockdowns were ordered, why were families given tickets for sitting in their cars with the windows up in church parking lots in required distances listening to pastors on the radio? What was the science behind that?

The Colorado Democratic governor decreed limits on numbers of people in church. Churches that seated 1,000 were allowed to have only 100 people in the building. The Supreme Court ruled against such restrictions.

A Michigan Democratic attorney general claimed that her son was "devasted" when someone said "Merry Christmas" to him. Do some Democrats now claim "Merry Christmas" to be hate speech?

In Minnesota, an unnamed nurse was chastised by a neighbor for putting up Christmas lights because they are a symbol of "systemic biases." My guess is that she is not a Republican.

A tattoo shop owner in Tennessee told Christians to "get MRSA" and "get toxic and die." He threatened Christians by saying on social media, "Yes, I will ACTUALLY hurt you." Threatening bodily harm is a crime in Kansas.

A Texas teacher mocked evangelical parents as "bigots" and "kooks" for objecting to a sexually explicit book. President Biden claimed that children don't belong to parents "when they are in the classroom." He quoted a teacher who said, "There's no such thing as someone else's child." Sounds like a preamble to government control of children, not their parents.

In Gardner, Kansas, the school board is considering whether to allow the Bible to be in the school library. Is the board considering whether to let the Koran be in the library? Wouldn't removing the Bible constitute book banning?

A Utah school has banned the King James Bible from school libraries claiming it includes sex and violence. If sex and violence is the standard, then every history book should be banned. Are books about LGBTQ+ allowed?

Maryland teachers required students to read LGBTQ books which were counter to their religion.

The Los Angeles Dodgers honored a drag queen group who were mocking some of the most sacred aspects of Christianity. How much more offensive will these leftist Christian-haters become?

A Fox News host was told to leave a restaurant because she prayed over her meal. Left-leaning CNN commentator Adam Kinzinger declared she was “most likely lying” about the incident. Evidence, anyone?

Blatant hatred of Christians is displayed by 420 attacks on churches between 2018 and 2022. There were 63 such attacks in January-March 2023. Those attacks include arson, vandalism, theft, bomb threats, assaults and gun-related incidents. The left probably considers those facts as mis/disinformation.

A leftist responded to the death of Christian evangelist Pat Robertson by labeling him a racist and extremist and called for him to “Rest in hell.”

A Texas Tech coach was suspended for citing a Bible verse about serving others that included the words “master” and “servant.” Use those words in any context and you could lose your job. Woe to you who have a master’s degree. That may make you a racist.

A person wearing a shirt at the Minnesota Mall of America with “Jesus saves” on it was forced by security guards to leave the building because some people were offended by it. If someone is wearing a military uniform in the mall, would that person be escorted out by security guards because someone was offended?

A Michigan State University professor ordered her 600 students to pay $99 each to be donated to Planned Parenthood. The university eventually refunded the money to the students and fired the professor.

A Tennessee school was forced to relocate a graduation ceremony from a church because a parent complained about the event being held in a church and a prayer would be said. The school district claimed that such a prayer was illegal, which it was not. As a result, parents and friends were relegated to a very small facility.

How soon will Democrats again attempt to force the Little Sisters of the Poor to provide contraceptive coverage as part of their health care plans?

Merry Christmas!
